Calcots railway station was a railway station in the parish of St Andrews-Lhanbryd, Moray. The railway station was opened by the Great North of Scotland Railway (GNoSR) on its Moray Firth coast line in 1884, served by Aberdeen to Elgin trains. It served a rural area rather than a discrete settlement and closed to regular passenger traffic on 6 May 1968 on the same date as the line itself.

Moray is Scotland's Sunshine Coast Statistically speaking Does Scotland really have a sunshine coast? Well, Moray, in the 'rain-shadow' of the Grampian mountains pretty much fits the bill. Honestly. Especially the favoured coastal strip, tucked below the hills, beyond the reach (mostly!) of the rainy south-westerlies off the Atlantic. So where exactly is Scotland's sunshine coast? It's a [...]
